

Getting Your Guy To Play With Toys

It's a question I get from women all the time: How do I ask my partner to try a toy in bed without hurting his feelings or making him feel like he's "not enough?"

Yeah, I get it.

You're looking to try something new. Or maybe you want to try a special toy that promises to hit all the right notes. Or you have a certain fantasy you'd like to play out.

But then you look over at the happy snoring lump next to you and you wonder how to bring it up without your man and his ego recoiling in horror.

It can be done and it's easier than you think.

First, arm yourself with this fact:

MOST men are actually TURNED ON by women who want to try new things in bed and who take control of their own pleasure. In fact, In the book Men, Love and Sex by David Zinczenko, 5000 men were surveyed and 79% said they wished their wives or girlfriends would try toys in the bedroom! So chances are, your guy is already on board!

And yeah, sure, some guys can feel like they are being "replaced" by a toy, or can't keep up with the fabulous-ness of a vibrator. But some simple reassurance can clear that up right away!

So, how do you suggest a toy?

First, you have to know your man. How do YOU think he would react to this suggestion? Would he be interested? Need some coaxing? Terrified of the idea?

If he's the type that's pretty game, then you're on your way! You two can pretty much just go online and start picking out some toys that turn you both on! Or you may even send him a link to one of our toys you've been eyeing with a little notes saying, "I know it's not Christmas yet, but..." and see what he thinks. (Just be careful about those work emails... No need to get him fired just because kitty wants to come out and play!)

But if you're not quite sure what his reaction might be, then here are a few ways of bringing up the subject.

Keep It Light. If you come at him in a serious tone, you're going to freak him out. Remember, sex is supposed to be fun. And Toys are fun. So Sex Toys are double the fun! If you come at him with some serious, "We need to TALK" tone, he's going to be defensive before you even begin and feel like you're unhappy with your sex life. And you're probably not going to get what you want.

If you're shy about the topic or think he may be shy, sometimes it's easier to bring up the subject in a round about way, like, "you know a friend of mine was telling about how fun this one toy is...". (And that's not lying, because I'M telling you!) Or you could tell him about a sexy dream you had with him in it... Hey, daydreams count! And if he says, "oh yeah? Tell me more..." then you can suggest adding in some fun!

Or another way to go is maybe pop in a sexy movie that gets your motor running. Maybe during it, you can say, "hmm, that kinda looks good, wanna try that? Or maybe even branch out and try something else? I'm feeling adventurous!" Sometimes a visual enticement will help open the doors to talk about new ideas, especially while the two of you are feeling hot and bothered.

Or try the barter system – Hey if it worked in the olden days, it can work now. Maybe he's always wanted you to squeeze into that Heidi costume and yodel for him? Well, say, you're willing to put your hair in braid if he's willing to man the Rabbit for a while.

http://www.cleosboutique.com/view\_item.php?id=198&

And please remind him that the toy is still not in charge, HE'S in charge... Of your orgasm. He'll be drunk with power!

Plus, you can always suggest a toy that the two of you can use. What could be good for the gander can also be good for the goose as well! Do a little looking around you'll find that there may be plenty of items that can be fun for the both of you. One of the most popular couple's toys is the Vibrating Ring:

http://www.cleosboutique.com/view\_item.php?id=136&

You'll be surprised. Once the two of you get started, you may get a nice little toy box of fun going. And who says you're too old to play with toys? It's just the opposite. The older you get, the better the toy!