

Why Your Pink Parts Should Go Green

So, I'm sitting here in beautiful Southern California, surrounded by hybrid cars, cloth bags for groceries and recycled paper.

And wasn't it just a matter of time before we started to look at our sex lives and see how we can be more environmentally friendly?

No, I'm not talking about recycling condoms... Oh, I think I just threw up a little in my mouth from that visual.

I'm talking about sex toys and other "Sexcessories" that are not only good for your KITTY but good for the planet.

Now I know some of you will think, "Awesome, Blossom! Where do I sign up?"

But others will think, "OOOOOOOOOh brother, how lame can you get?"

Hey, I'm not saying this article is for everyone. Some people could care less about the so called GREEN products and think those who do care are a bunch of tree huggin' sprout eaters.

And that's cool. You go enjoy your McDonald's and aerosol spray while leaving all the lights on. I'm not here to judge.

But there are a ton of people out there who are becoming more and more interested in / concerned with the stuff we eat / wear / inhale / stick in our butts.

(Seriously, who else gets to write stuff like this? I love my job.)

So, for YOU, I set out to explore the land of eco-friendly sex toys and found that you can rock your pretty clitty and Mother Earth at the same time.

I mean, if you didn't have a reason to play with sex toys before, DO IT FOR THE ENVIRONMENT!!!!

Let me start by telling you what the benefits are for playing green:

Eco-Friendly sex toy manufacturers have taken out the hormone disrupting PHTHALATES.

What the hell are Phthalates?

Put on your learning cap and I'll tell ya.

Phthalates are oil-derived chemicals that have been used to soften dildos, vibrators and ahem, butt plugs. (Along with children's toys.)

These phthalates have been found to allegedly pose a risk to human health and the environment. Yikes!

So much so that they have been banned from kids toys in Europe permanently.

Need more of a push?

Well, get this...

GREENPEACE... Yes, THE Greenpeace issued a TOXIC SEX TOY WARNING... (I swear when I read that, I just about fell out of my chair. How hilarious and tragic is that, at the same time???)

The organization warned NOT to shove the "Spectra Gel Anal Plug" or the "Crystal Jelly Double Dong" where the sun does not shine, if you get my drift.

So I figure, if it's a health risk to the kiddies, then it could be a health risk to my KITTY.

So here are a few of my ECO-Favorite things:

Anything LELO

Lelo is a Swedish company that makes super pretty, super hot, and super green sex toys. They're very sleek in design. You can leave most of their toys out and claim them as a piece of art. (Who would be the wiser, wink, wink.)

Their toys are ergonomically designed to fit every nook and cranny of your body, promising to make both your pretty clitty and G-Spot a converted fan.

And they're made with medical-grade silicone, making these darlings toxin free.

The only drawback is that they are more costly, but the quality is excellent and they last longer, so I think they're worth it. (Momma L has several Lelo's in her toy box!)

I'm especially partial to The Lelo Elise Vibrator and the Lelo Lily Massager.

And for you little sex kittens that like a little surprise from the back door, let me recommend the non-toxic Lelo Luna Pleasure Bead System.

THE RABBIT HABIT

I know, I know. There's a TON of fans out there of the Rabbit. Especially after "Sex and the City" came out with an episode featuring the Rabbit, it became the most googled sex toy all around the world!

Well, here's another version of the Rabbit, still fabulous, with all the same yummy stimulations but is crafted from 100% Elastomer and is phthalate-free.

Now that's something to climax over!

Women's Agape Warming Lube

One of the few water-based lubricants that feels like silicon. The Women's Agape is an excellent choice for anyone with skin sensitivities. It is long lasting and never sticky feeling. It is non-toxic, non-allergenic, and odor and fragrance free.

Wow, all this talk about sex toys... I may have to um, practice what I preach...

I'll be back soon with more answers to your sexual questions. In the meantime, have FUN researching!

Take Care and Happy Sex
